Lovingly restored to the highest of quality and continuing in the original style, from the moment you step inside, you are embraced with the warmth and charm of a very old soul wanting to share their story.

So lets go on a quick journey.

This beautiful Queensland cottage started life in the late 1800's as a farm house for a cotton farm in the Logan area. Due to a cotton shortage in Britain owing to the US civil war, it was suggested that suitable parts of the British Empire should turn to cotton production however following the end of the war, the plantations at Logan and surrounds were devastated and the cotton fields ruined..

In 1992, this cottage was relocated to its current place where it has been lovingly re modelled and restored to a glorious home that will encapture the most fastidious of buyer.
