The town's strategic location near the South Australian border provides excellent connectivity, with regular air services to Adelaide, Sydney, Dubbo and Griffith through Rex Airlines. The Indian Pacific rail service connects residents to major capitals, while road coach services link to regional centres including Mildura and Adelaide.

Broken Hill's economy continues to evolve beyond its mining roots, with tourism, agriculture and renewable energy sectors providing diverse employment opportunities. The recent completion of major infrastructure projects, including the new water pipeline from the Murray River, ensures the town's sustainable future for decades to come.
